Visitor Release Form

Welcome to the Joyworks studio in Ann Arbor, Michigan. You are entering a creative environment in which certain hazards exist. As a visitor, you are required to wear the appropriate safety gear. This includes safety glasses, closed toe shoes and clothing that cover your skin, face and head as appropriate for the processes currently being conducted. If you find yourself in the immediate area of hot and/or molten metals you must wear additional safety equipment as covered by your host.

The Joyworks studio is a creative, experimental environment where new techniques and processes are explored. Existing hazards may include heavy loads borne on overhead hoists, hot and molten metals, dust, grinding sparks and particulates, welding and cutting flash and sparks, power tools, hazardous chemicals and heavy objects. None of these items are inherently hazardous if used according to the provided procedures and within the guidelines explained by Joyworks employees or contractors. For many operations there are specific procedures, manuals and/or visual aids to instruct you in the proper and safe way to proceed. You must not undertake any potentially hazardous activity in the Joyworks studio without the proper instruction or permission.

There are three doors and six windows from which one may exit the building in the case of emergency. The emergency telephone number is 911 and emergency personnel should be directed to 1409 West Joy Road, Ann Arbor Township, Michigan (which is located behind the home at 1407 West Joy Road).

While visiting the Joyworks studio you must be accompanied at all times. Joyworks assumes no risk for injury, dismemberment or death. Your signature on this document is required for you to visit the facility and releases Joyworks for any liability other than that caused by gross negligence. While every step will be taken to make your visit a safe and enjoyable one, ultimately you are responsible for your own safety. Enjoy your visit.
